

Hidden Hills Missionary Baptist Herald

“Preaching Jesus Christ crucified, buried, and risen to a condemned world”

Volume 7

January—Winter—2007

Number 1

Christian Baptism— The Profession of the Faith of the Gospel

BAPTISM IS THE PROFESSION, ON THE PART OF THE SUBJECT, OF "THE FAITH" OF THE GOSPEL.

TEXT.—"Into [eis] what then were ye baptized?" —Acts xix: 3.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM is not the celebration of a religious rite by modes indifferent; but a specific act to be administered by a specific body, to persons professing specific qualifications, for the profession of specific truths. When one of these properties is wanting, the transaction is "null and void," since, unless the ordinances are observed as Christ commanded, they are not kept, but perverted, and bring upon the parties not the commendation, but condemnation, of the Master.

The Divine Inceptor of the rite selected but one word to indicate the act he designed to be observed, and that word—baptize—which never had but one meaning, when referring to persons, viz: "To dip in or under water," and therefore immersion in water was the act he expressly commanded, and thereby as expressly forbade any other act to be performed in his name for Christian baptism.

It is admitted by all that a Scriptural church is the only organization he authorized to administer this rite; and it is a notable fact that all the most eminent Pedobaptist scholars of both continents freely admit that there is neither precept nor example in the Scriptures for the administration of baptism to any other than to those who give credible evidence of repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ; while some, whose scholarship can not be doubted, frankly admit that the baptism of unbelieving children is not only not justified by the Scriptures, but utterly opposed to the genius of the gospel, and the fundamental principles of the New Testament. It only remains to ascertain what are the specific truths or facts Christian baptism was instituted to express, and this is what I propose to do in this discourse.

That baptism was instituted by Christ for some definite purpose all denominations admit. That it is for the profession of something on the part of the subject is not only set forth by all Catholic and Protestant creeds, but must be the conviction of every reader of the Scriptures. The question of Paul to the twelve disciples, at Ephesus, which I have chosen to discuss, clearly supposes this.

When Paul heard from these disciples that they had not so much as heard of the existence of the third person in the Trinity, he asked, with evident astonishment: "Into what then were ye immersed?" He was understood by them to ask what faith they could have professed by their baptism; and they answered: "Into John's baptism," i.e., the faith preached by John the Baptist. They did not say they had been baptized by John, and their very answer implies that they had not; for they could not have heard John preach, or been baptized by him, without having heard of, and experienced, professedly, at least, the convicting and regenerating influences of the Holy Spirit. John baptized only those who gave him satisfactory evidence of repentance toward God and faith in Christ soon to appear, and no one could exercise these graces without the influences of the Holy Spirit. They had doubtless been instructed and immersed by Apollos, a disciple of John, who was preaching in these parts, and he knew nothing but the baptism of John, and he had no authority to baptize. Three of the four essential properties of Christian baptism were wanting in their case:

Christian Baptism — Continued

The proper authority. No one but John was authorized to administer his baptism; and he certainly authorized none of his disciples to baptize.

They were evidently unregenerate, and therefore disqualified to receive Christian baptism.

The Hidden Hills Missionary Baptist Herald is an authorized publication of the Hidden Hills Sovereign Grace Baptist Church. The Herald is published as an informational and evangelistic paper for the church. Costs incurred in the production and distribution of the paper are borne by the Hidden Hills Sovereign Grace Baptist Church. Contributions are neither solicited nor accepted.

Comments from readers are welcome and may be mailed or E-mailed to the Editor.

Hidden Hills Sovereign Grace Baptist Church

Leon King, Editor
 HC 89, Box 1412
 Willow, Alaska 99688-9604
 E-Mail: leonking47@msn.com
 Telephone: 907-495-5905
 1-866-495-5905
 Web Site:
www.hiddenhillssgbaptistchurch.org

They did not profess the proper faith in their baptism.

Paul therefore rightly instructed and baptized them.

We learn from this scripture:

1. That, persons may be immersed, and yet not have received the Christian immersion.
2. That, they may be immersed by an administrator who had himself been immersed, and yet not obey Christ in the act.
3. That, persons may have been immersed, and satisfied with their baptism, and yet not have received Christian immersion or baptism.
4. That, unless professing the proper qualifications, and professing the proper faith, an immersion by even a proper authority is null and void.

This example is positive instruction to the churches in all subsequent ages to readminister the act, where there has been an irregularity, which is nothing less than a violation of the law governing the ordinance. The church at Corinth conscientiously believed they were correctly administering the Lord's Supper, while they were shamefully perverting it, and making themselves "guilty of the body and blood of the Lord Jesus." – 1 Corinthians 11:27.

Now that Christian baptism has been and still is regarded as the act, on the part of the subject, of professing the faith of the church baptizing, whether true or false, is proven by the fact that from the third century onward, the "catachumeni" – those under course of instruction for baptism -- were required to repeat the creed of the church, and then the question was invariably asked: "Wilt thou be baptized into this faith" i.e., do you desire to profess that you receive to hold and rest your salvation upon it? Only upon the candidate answering, 'I will,' was the baptism administered.

Even when those post apostolic churches that perverted the rite of baptism to a "sacrament" and "seal" of salvation, and administered it to unconscious infants to secure their salvation, sponsors and godfathers and mothers were invented to answer for the speechless babe.

Christian Baptism — continued

The Episcopalians retain this custom, and of every infant sprinkled by them this question is asked:

"Dost thou believe all the articles of the Christian faith as contained in the Apostles' Creed?" The sponsor answers (for the infant), "I do." "Wilt thou be baptized in this faith?" Sponsor (for infant), "That is my desire."

The subject of baptism does not then profess any private faith he may entertain, but always the faith of the denomination baptizing him. Let us here briefly notice the design of baptism held and taught by the leading ones around us, as we find in their published Articles of Faith and Confessions:

ROMAN CATHOLICS

"Baptism is a sacrament instituted by Christ to wash away original sin, and all those we may have committed; to communicate to mankind the spiritual regeneration and grace of Jesus Christ, and to unite them to the living head. If any man shall say that baptism is not essential to salvation, let him be accursed. In baptism, not only our sins are remitted, but all the punishment of sins and wickedness." — Council of Trent.

THE FAITH OF THE CAMPBELLITES

Mr. Campbell, the originator of this sect, is certainly qualified to explain this. He says:

"In and by the act of immersion, as soon as our bodies are put under the water — at that very instant -- all our former or old sins are all washed away." — Ch. Bap., p. 100.

"Immersion is the means divinely appointed for the actual enjoyment of the first and greatest blessings." — Mill. Har.

"Remission of sins can not be enjoyed by any person before immersion."

"Belief of this testimony is what impelled us into the water, knowing that the efficacy of his blood is to be communicated to our consciences in the way which God has pleased to appoint; we stagger not at the promise, but flee to the sacred ordinance [water] which brought the blood of Jesus in contact with out consciences. Without knowing and believing this, immersion is as a blasted nut — the shell is there, but the kernel is wanting." — Ch. Bap., p. 521.

The standard writers of the "Disciples," M. E. Lard, Benj. Franklin, Dr. Hobson, of this day, perfectly accord with Mr. Campbell in teaching that baptism is in order to the remission of sins.

We see that the Campbellites baptized into the self-same faith that the Catholics do. Mr. Campbell asserts, with all the force he can give his language, that the sinner can only come to Christ "Through the water," that he can only reach the blood of Christ by being immersed into the water, and without the candidate knows and believes this, and receives the rite to secure this, his baptism is "as a blasted nut!"

This sect, therefore, unite with the teachers of an apostate Christianity in placing the water before the blood, thus bringing an unpardoned, unregenerate sinner to water baptism as the sacrament of salvation. Surely no church of Christ can indorse this pernicious doctrine, by receiving those immersed by Catholics or Campbellites as Scripturally baptized without rejecting the faith of the gospel.

EPISCOPALIANS

That the Protestant Episcopal branch baptizes into the same faith as its parent body — the Catholic — her own standards attest and her scholars freely admit.

Every one ever yet confirmed as a member of that body at his confirmation was and still is required to give this answer to the question:

Ques. — "Who gave you this name?"

Ans. — "My sponsors in baptism, wherein I was made a member of Christ, a child of God, and an inheritor of the kingdom of heaven."

All adults as well as infants who receive the baptism of this church are properly baptized into that state of pardon, regeneration and salvation. Mellville, the distinguished preacher of that church, says: "I do not see how I can be commonly honest and yet deny that every baptized person is on that account regenerate."

Christian Baptism — Continued

THE METHODISTS

Many come to us from the Methodist denomination, and let us seek from them the answer to the question: "Into what faith do they baptize?" Mr. Wesley, who asserted that he was the father and founder of the whole system, says: "It is certain that our church supposes that all who are baptized in their infancy are at the same time born again." . . . "If infants are guilty of original sin they can not be saved in the ordinary way, unless this be washed away by baptism."

"Into what do Methodists baptize adults?"

"By baptism we, who are by nature children of wrath, are made the children of God. . . . In all ages the outward baptism is a means of the inward. . . . By water then, as a means – the water of baptism – we are regenerated or born again." – Wesley's Works, vol. 6, sec 4.

The last Methodist Conference that met in Memphis, Tenn., in an official report condemned the growing practice of baptizing persons upon a profession of regeneration as an evil! I quote a paragraph: "Baptism, too, has been unnecessarily deferred, not only in the case of children, but sometimes postponed to an indefinite period in the case of adults. The practice of requiring a public profession of regeneration before baptism has resulted in evil, and that the design of the sacrament is perverted. And the people encouraged to expect the divine blessing without the use of the means [i.e., baptism]. We call attention to these evils that we may seek diligently to remove them." – Copied from the Western Methodist.

It is a fact, the truth of which every one can easily satisfy himself about by examining the Methodist Ritual for the baptism of adults, that no regenerate person can be baptized according to its teachings. Every adult, without exception is required to profess himself an unregenerate, unpardoned sinner, and that he comes to baptism to obtain remission of sins and regeneration of the heart, and he is baptized in the hope of obtaining these. You have very properly decided that immersions into such a faith, by Baptist churches, would be worse than null, since the subject would profess a false and pernicious faith; and such baptisms, if they could be so called, would only introduce professedly unregenerate adults into the church, and aid in deceiving them to their own ruin.

PRESBYTERIANS

By referring to the "Shorter Catechism" we have a concise statement of the faith into which the Presbyterian Church baptizes.

Ques. – "What is a sacrament?"

Ans. – "A sacrament is a holy ordinance instituted by Christ, wherein [i.e., in the receiving of which], by sensible signs, Christ and the benefits of the New Covenant are represented, sealed and applied to believers."

It is evident that the Covenant of Grace is worthless to any one, unless sealed and applied to him. Therefore, unless the sacraments are received, none of the benefits of Christ's death can be enjoyed by any one. This is clear.

Ques. – "Now what ordinances are sacraments wherein, or by and through which, alone the benefits of Christ's death are enjoyed?"

Ans. – "The Sacraments of the New Testament are baptism and the Lord's Supper."

Ques. – "What is baptism?"

Ans. – "Baptism is a Sacrament of the New Testament, wherein Christ hath ordained the washing with water in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, to be a sign and seal of the engrafting into himself, of remission of sins by his blood, and regeneration by his Spirit, of adoption, and resurrection unto everlasting life."

BAPTISTS

We now inquire, Into what do Baptist churches baptize?

Our historical ancestors – A. D. 1120, four hundred years before a Protestant sect existed, or Luther and Calvin had been born – taught this concerning the above doctrine of remission and regeneration by baptism, in a little work defining Anti-Christ, viz:

"A third work of Anti-Christ consists in this, that he attributes the regeneration of the Holy Ghost unto the mere external act – baptizing infants into the faith, teaching that thereby regeneration must be had; on which principle he bestows orders, and, indeed, grounds all his Christianity, which is contrary to the word of the Holy Scriptures.”

Christian Baptism — Continued

Can it be that there is a Baptist church in this age that will condemn the decision of the martyr Baptists of the twelfth century, and approve and indorse the baptismal acts of those sects that hold and teach baptism for regeneration by receiving them as valid?

From the fourteenth Article of Faith put forth by them, I copy the seventh:

Art. 7. – “We believe in the ordinance of baptism. The water is the visible, external, which represents to us that which, by virtue of God’s invisible operation, is within us, viz: the renovation of our minds, and the mortification of our members through faith of Jesus Christ; and by this ordinance we are received into the holy congregation of God’s people, previously professing and declaring our faith and change of life.”

It is certain that no Catholics or Protestants ever held or taught such sentiments as these: but this design of baptism, Baptists alone hold and teach today. It is the characteristic doctrine that distinguishes us from all other denominations.

Now to develop more clearly the work or righteousness of Jesus Christ, upon which our faith takes hold and rests, I point you to the baptism of Christ himself. He is our great exemplar, as well as teacher; and he not only determined the act by his example, but he expressly declared the profession we should make, and the belief into which we should be immersed.

He declared that his own baptism was in some sense “to fulfill all righteousness,” and we may say our baptism is to do the same thing in the same sense.

We know Christ was not baptized “in order to the remission” of his sins – “to wash away” his sins – for he was “holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners;” nor are we to come to the water for any such purpose, for we are not warranted to come until we have been washed in his blood, which cleanseth from all sin. Therefore we have no sins for water to cleanse, if it had cleansing power. We come not to the water for pardon, but with pardon – with the sweet consciousness of pardon in our hearts. Nor did Christ receive the “seal” of any covenant; for “him God the Father,” not John the Baptist, “sealed.” No more is it a seal of the covenant of grace to us, for the Holy Spirit distinctly teaches that we are “sealed by the Holy Spirit” the moment we believe, and never before. “In whom, after that ye believed, ye were sealed by the Holy Spirit,” etc. – Eph. i: 13.

Nor was Christ baptized to induct him into his priestly office, as so many falsely teach; for – 1, John had no authority to make a high priest; 2, No one could induct a high priest into office at the Jordan, and by immersing him; 3, Christ came not of the tribe to which belonged the priesthood; nor, 4, Was Christ made a priest by any law of carnal commandment, as Jewish high priests were made. Will those who have believed this stop and think, for one moment, what the fearful conclusion must be? No one could have been saved until Christ was truly made a High Priest – “Inducted into his office;” and therefore this theory inevitably consigns the whole human family to helpless and hopeless perdition, up to the very hour John baptized Christ, leaving the world for four thousand years without a Savior! The covenant of grace had no retrospective force or efficacy – only prospective.

Let us clearly understand for what purpose Christ was baptized in the river of Jordan. He came to earth to work out a perfect righteousness for his people – to satisfy the infinite claims of divine justice for all who would that grace receive. It was this “all-righteousness” he declared he wished to fulfill in his baptism. This he evidently could not literally accomplish by being baptized, else he might have ascended from the water in a chariot of glory to the right hand of the Father. But if he did fulfill the “all-righteousness” he came to earth to accomplish, he must have done it figuratively. We know that it was in a figure he fulfilled it; for the Holy Spirit expressly declares that the rite of baptism is only a figure – “The like figure whereunto baptism doth now also save us.” If baptism is only a figure, whatever it is said to do, or we are said to do in or by it, must be done figuratively. If it saves us, it saves us figuratively. i.e., declaratively. If we are by it baptized into Christ, it is done figuratively, as the Jews were into Moses. If we are baptized into his death, we only figure, symbolize it. So if Christ did in his baptism, fulfill all righteousness, he must, he could only have prefigured the acts which constitutes the all-righteousness. He set before their eyes, in a vivid figure, the three great acts by which he did fulfill the "all-righteousness" the law required in order that those for whom he appeared might be set free from the divine law, and their redemption eternally secured.

Christian Baptism — continued

The law required the death of the transgressor, and Christ must therefore sink under the stroke of death for them. The penalty of sin, threatened to the first Adam, was borne by the second, "the Lord from heaven," not by his mere humanity, in which he was made manifest to us. That penalty was death, not mere physical, but spiritual, death, i.e., separation from God, the withdrawing of God from the soul. Physical death and all our sorrows are but the inseparable consequences of God's favor withdrawn from us. It is sin that separates between us and God. "But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." – Isaiah lix: 2.

It was upon our divine Redeemer, who alone was able to bear them, that all our sins were laid, and thus "he was made sin for us who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." It was for this cause the Father hid his face from his Divine Son. It was the second Adam – the Lord from heaven, not the mere fleshly tabernacle in which his divinity was veiled – that suffered this infinite penalty. It was none other than the second Person in the Godhead, who, before the foundations of the earth were laid, covenanted with his Divine Fellows to satisfy by suffering all the demands of the divine government, to be a Mediator, that he might be the Redeemer of his people. It was therefore the Fellow, a coequal Person in the Godhead, whom the Father commanded the sword of justice to smite. It was that fiery two-edged sword, bathed in the wrath of an incensed God, due to our sins, and the averted face of his Father, which extorted that fearful cry: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? – a cry that struck the banners of heaven at half-mast, rent the solid rocks of Calvary; a cry whose echo still reverberates over a lost world to-day, arresting the attention, and drawing, by its wondrous power, all men unto the cross. It was he who made the worlds who yielded up his spirit and sank in death to save us from death.

"He suffered!" Was it, Lord, indeed for me,
The Just One for the unjust, Thou didst bear
The weight of sorrow that I hardly dare
To gaze upon, in dark Gethsemane?

"He suffered!" Thou, my near and gracious Friend,
And yet my Lord, my God! Thou didst not shrink,
For me that full and fearful cup to drink,
Because Thou lovest even to the end!

"He suffered!" Savior, was Thy love so vast,
That mysteries of unknown agony,
Even unto death, its only gauge could be,
Unmeasured as the fiery depths it passed?
Lord, by Thy sufferings on Calvary,
Seal Thou my quivering love forever unto Thee!

But Christ had more than to suffer the infinite penalty of violated law, and sink in death under its direful curse; more than merely to make satisfaction for sin, in order to redeem us. The fiery sting of Death had to be extracted, the dread power of the grave had to be vanquished, and a way prepared for the release of its captives from its darkness and hopelessness. It must not be lost sight of that Christ, in the Covenant of Redemption, engaged to redeem our bodies from the power of the grave, as well as our souls from endless death. For four thousand years Death, seated upon his throne of human skulls, had reigned undisputed monarch over Adam's whole race – king of terrors, and terrors of kings. Into his subterranean empire of eternal silence, into which no ray of light or hope had ever dawned, he had dragged down the generations of the living, and ground them into the dust at his feet.

This dread tyrant must be vanquished, his sting extracted, his scepter broken, and the key of his impregnable citadel taken forever from him. Christ, our Almighty Redeemer, could do this. "He was buried" – he went down into the dark dominions of death, and the bolts of its ponderous doors were turned upon him to cut off his retreat. Did not angels tremble while hell triumphed at this fearful step, for the key of that door was in the hands of Death! But Christ entered to conquer; and he who was the "Mighty One" was able to deliver his people from the power of the grave, and open up to them a way of life and salvation. He broke the iron scepter of Death; he spoiled the principalities and powers of darkness, and made a show of them openly; he robbed Death of his sting, and tore from his girdle the keys of Hades and the grave; he burst the bars of death, and illumed the dark valley and shadow of death with the light of heaven itself, and filled it with the songs of angels who wait there "to minister unto those who are heirs of salvation." "Glory to God in the highest!" for what Christ had done for his saints. I have been made to understand and realize that the victory Christ obtained in the grave gives victory to his saints over Death. In 1867, I stood by the bedside of a dying mother. The thought of witnessing her death had always filled me with dread and pain; the thought of seeing her struggle and writhe in the grasp of the fearful merciless monster alone, and I could not succor her! But how was it on that midnight hour on earth, that heaven's noontide of glory broke upon the vision of that departing spirit; and the valley of the shadow of death grew brighter and brighter as I followed her up until she was lost to my sight in the very splendors of the tomb? What could I say but "Blessed Jesus, Savior of my mother, I thank thee for this hour, that thou has given me to see and realize that thou has given her the victory over death." It was but one week after that, the mother of my children, a fearful, timid woman, struck down by the pestilence, was called to pass into the dreaded valley; and when she bade me farewell, in answer to my earnest inquiry, if there was a fear, a doubt, a cloud, she answered: "No, all is bright – so bright; I am so happy." And when she closed her eyes – gently as ever babe sank to its slumbers – there was the light, not on earth, on that brow, and a smile upon those lips left by the angels. It is meet for his wearied children to rest – to sleep a little while – though it be in the grave, it is upon a bed made soft by a Savior's loving hands, and is overarched by the rainbow of promise. It is only for a little season – while he goes to prepare a place for them; and when he comes again – gentle as a mother wakes her child from its restful sleep, will he wake up all his sleeping saints to behold the glories of the resurrection morning! Who, save the Child of God, can sing, in view of death and the grave

Christian Baptism — continued

– "I would not live always; no! welcome the tomb;
Since Jesus hath lain there, I dread not its gloom;
There sweet be my rest till he bids me arise,
To hail him in triumph descending the skies."

He must needs rise from the dead. "He rose," says the apostle, "for our justification." He had engaged, in everlasting covenant, to rescue his people from the power of the grave. While the claims of the divine law were unsatisfied, no power in heaven could, in equity, open that prison house, or allow a prisoner to go free. Christ's release was a proof that he had discharged all claims against all believers. His resurrection from the dead was therefore an earnest of our own. As certainly as he rose, his people are free from the dominion of law, the power of the grave, and they will rise from the dead also. Thus, then, did he, by his baptism, prefigure these three acts, which Paul says constitute the gospel by which we are saved, and thus in figure did he "fulfill all righteousness."

"Thus did the glorious Prince of Life
All righteousness fulfill
In emblem of that fearful strife,
When by his Father's will,
He sank beneath death's darker flood,
And angels saw him bathed in blood."

I can not have mistaken His meaning, for He himself called his crucifixion a baptism – "I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitened until it be accomplished?" – Luke xii: 50.

Paul also declares that three acts constitute the whole gospel by which we are saved, if we rightly apprehend and believe:

"How that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; 2. that he was buried; 3. that he rose again the third day." (1 Cor. xv: 1-5.)

Christ, then, in a lively figure, set before the eyes of all his sacrificial work – the ground of our salvation. He also declared to the Galatians that Christian baptism was a figure – picture – of the crucifixion of Christ; that in witnessing baptism they had, in a figure, seen Christ crucified. "O foolish Galatians! who hath bewitched you, that he should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth [literally, represented]

Hidden Hills Sovereign Grace Baptist Church

HC 89, Box 1412

Willow, Alaska 99688-9604

PRSR STD
U. S. Postage
PAID
Willow, AK
Permit No.
23

Don't build your house on the sand!*Christian Baptism — Concluded crucified among you?" – Gal. iii: 1.

The reader will notice that the crucifixion had been represented to their eyes, not to their ears. And, therefore, it must have been by some figure, and not by words. In their own and in every baptism they had witnessed, the crucifixion of Christ had been evidently set forth before their eyes in a figure.

Christ, our great Exemplar, did, by his own baptism, set before us the acts which constituted the "all righteousness" he came to fulfill for us, and this "all righteousness" he positively commands us to fulfill in the same way in our baptism – to be immersed into the faith of what we have realized Christ did for us, and on which we solely rest for our salvation – the "all righteousness" of Christ. We must be able to say, when we come to baptism: "I know whom I have believed," and to feel that Christ is indeed my righteousness; and that –

"My hope is built on nothing less Than Jesus' blood and righteousness.
I dare not trust the sweetest frame, But wholly lean on Jesus' name.
On Christ the Solid Rock I stand, All other ground is sinking sand."

I ask you, my Christian brother or sister, who have never represented in your baptism the death, burial and resurrection of your Redeemer, is it too much for Christ to require of those whom he died to save, to represent the great acts of his redemptive work, and profess their own personal faith in, and conscious salvation by them as they enter his church on earth? The soul redeemed by his precious blood will rejoice to do it despite the sneers of an ungodly world. It sees in it a sublimity and a grandeur beyond a mere mortal's comprehension! It glories in the privilege of representing before the eyes of the world the "all righteousness" of its Savior; of setting forth the crucifixion, and thus preaching the gospel of Christ to all beholders.

This, be assured, is the baptism into which Christ commanded his church to baptize, and by the institution of this he forbade us to observe or to recognize any other.

[From Christian Baptism, The Profession of the Faith of the Gospel, by J. R. Graves, first published by the author in Memphis, Tennessee, in 1881. Dr. Graves' book is published herein, in part, verbatim except for the editor's marking for clarification. The editor is in complete agreement with Dr. Graves' understanding of the purpose and design of baptism.]

Schedule of Services

Sunday Worship.....12:00 PM
Wednesday Prayer..... 7:00 PM
Our meeting house is located just south of the intersection of Bendapole Road
and Passthebaite Avenue